

CHANGE MUST COME

Traditionally, after a school shooting there is a huge coverage and condolences to those who have lost in such tragic acts of terrorism. As time goes on, the news cycle runs its course and moves to the next story. But, those personally affected can not move on. They are given "thoughts and prayers" but no real change is made. Their story seems to move into the background until another school shooting happens. A real change must come.

There needs to be more discussion on the Federal level in effective ways to protect our students lives against such horrific events. Though as difficult of a topic terrorism is and its unpredictable nature, there are ways the government can further prevent mass-shootings.

“I’ve had enough of thoughts and prayers, the hashtags, all of it. We need to make actual change. There’s only so many words that can be said before things move on, before the press gets tired of seeing us on the news, before people just change the channel. This will not be forgotten. We will not be silenced. We are going to make a change.” -Delaney Tarr, Parkland school shooting survivor.
