When finding my research on pet therapy bettering older adults quality of life I decided to go to Longwood’s database and find articles that have been published and are scholarly articles. Listed at the bottom of this paper are the references that I used for writing my paper. Also, when finding my articles through Longwood’s database I only chose articles that I could find online and that I did not have to request to see a paper copy of. The reason why I did that was because I know it takes a long time for the library to get back to you and I just wanted to have the articles right away.

When writing this paper I found that all these studies were just clarifying my thoughts on pet therapy. I know that pet therapy works and all the experiments just helped show proof that it is an extremely helpful therapy. Not all therapy works on everyone and that was shown in the articles and research found in the experiments. The information found in each article was creditable and very informational for my research paper. I was able to read about the study, population, hypothesis, experiment, and the conclusion of each article. All of the studies were experimental and one reference I found was a book about a doctor who told his story about how he saw pet therapy work with his patients.

I love doing research on things that interest me and this just helped me find out more about pet therapy. And now I feel more knowledgeable about pet therapy and it has made me want to conduct my own experiment on pet therapy. Hopefully, one day that will happen.
References

