

Reply all | Delete | Junk | Block | ...

Final Exam Grade Posted / Final Grades Submitted: CRIM-100-01-Survey of Criminal Justice

Hello!

This will be the final message you receive from me this semester and is just to pass along a few last pieces of information.

The grades from the final exam are now posted on Canvas.

The closing response rate for the extra credit opportunity was 100%. I didn't have any of my 8 classes last year achieve this, but had you all and my corrections course pulled it off this semester. This means that the entire class earned 5 bonus points on the final exam. The grade you see on Canvas already has those bonus points factored in (so, your true grade is what you see minus 5 points).

With that last exam grade entered, your final class grade is set. Please remember, as stated in the syllabus, that grades in here are A, B, C, D, or F with no plus/minus system utilized. Your final grade has already been submitted to Longwood.

Any emails received that involve bumping up your grade (I do round up from a .5, so an 89.5 would become a 90.0 for example), curves, individual extra credit opportunities, make up assignments, redoing assignments, turning in something you didn't turn in or do before a due date, etc. will be deleted without a response. I've made my expectations very clear all semester that the grade you received will be the one you earned. While it is frustrating to get close to a certain grade and fall short (happened to me on more than one occasion during my college career), that does not entitle anyone to a chance to raise their grade at the very end of the semester after all assignments have been completed (especially considering you just had 5 points added to your final exam grade). Everyone had all semester to try and ensure that they received the grade they wanted. The class is over, all work is done, and, again, your final grade has already been submitted, so there is no changing it now.

Good luck with any remaining exams left to take. Once again, thank you for your hard work this semester. Enjoy your winter break once you make it there and happy holidays.