

Moving Facilities Management offices to the site of the old lumberyard will free up space on the main campus.

The Curry and Frazer residence halls will get a facelift.

A new statue of Joan of Arc will preside over the south end of Brock Commons.

A 500-seat performing arts center is envisioned as a destination

Willett Hall will have a new façade in time for the Vice Presidential Debate and expand in the future to provide additional academic and athletics space.

Sharp and Register residence halls will open in fall 2016.

The Venable Triangle can become a bridge between campus and downtown, with possible small-scale residence halls and retail space.

An academic building will provide additional classroom and office space.

The Student Success Center will bring together critical academic services.

West Redford Gateway

HIGH STREET

MAIN STREET

BROCK COMMONS

Upchurch University Center

GRIFFIN BOULEVARD

A new admissions building will welcome visitors and showcase the Longwood story.

A new entrance at Brock Commons' north end will provide an 'iconic photo moment.'

'Main campus will be more of a community, there will be destination event venues to attract people, the university and the town will be linked in important ways, and Farmville will be growing to become one of the best college towns in the nation.'

— JOHN KIRK, COOPER ROBERTSON

A proposed roundabout would transform a confusing intersection into a beautiful introduction to campus.

This map includes elements of the new "Place Matters" 2025 Master Plan as well as projects that were already planned or under way.    New master plan    Previously planned project