

Translating Treasures

November 12, 2021- FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Transforming communication one trinket at a time

FAMVILLE, Va.- New translation devices in the form of jewelry were announced yesterday by KME LLC.

“Standard translation devices do not allow for communication amongst multiple languages and they do not offer an on-the-go option for their users” said KME LLC business partners Kayla Paolillo, Morgan Lent, and Emily Friel during an interview about their products. “With Translating Treasures users are able to wear our newest technology in order to look fashionable and translate every language and animal sound as it is detected.”

Translating Treasures are state of the art communication devices that are in the form of necklaces, brooches, rings, and bracelets. The unique design of these pieces allow users to simply wear the jewelry and be in range of detectable audio. When the device picks up audio, it is translated to the user no matter the language. It even allows for communication between animals and humans!

These devices offer the following technological and visual features:

- Voice recognition technology
- 1 small speaker
- 1 miniscule microphone
- 1 unique, polished gemstone

Translating Treasures is committed to offering jewelry that sparks communication, connection, and compliments at an affordable price. KME LLC offers 3 different payment plans to make accessibility even easier to its users.
