Atlanta, GA - A unique device that translates your dogs' sounds into words was announced today by animal products company Pet-tacular.

"We strive to create a better relationship for both pets and owners," said the company's founders in the announcement of the new product. "With Dog Dialogue, pets and owners will have the ability to create a better a relationship."

This translator is the first of a new era of communication devices. Our researchers combined electronic voice technology with a device that measures neural impulses into a collar that analyzes a dog's thoughts and translates them into human speech.

Dog Dialogue is available in different models: Basic and Advanced. The basic model translates basic feelings of dogs, such as happy, mad, hungry, and tired. It comes with the Dog Dialogue app and is priced at $50. The advanced model comes with a variety of features such as tracking and identification technology, premium app access, and word for word translation. This model is priced at $200.

"As a dog owner, I always looking to improve my relationship I have with my dog. Dog Dialogue has given me the opportunity to communicate with my dogs to help me fulfill their wants and needs," said Kristen Wilcox, a Dog Dialogue product tester.

"Dog Dialogue has allowed my owner and I to really get to know each other on a personal basis," barked Chevy Collier. "He now knows my favorite toy is a tennis ball."

Pet-tacular is offering a limited time promotional code, "Brochure10," to receive 10% off your Dog Dialogue.
