To whom it may concern,

I am currently a Social Work major, completing my senior year of college. I hope by the end of my college career, I will become a future Social Worker. The department I desire to work in is Child Protective Services and School Social work. I like the idea of both because one I get summers off with the students and the other I enjoy working with children.

I have taken many Social work courses here at Longwood University. The social work program has offered me a wide range of opportunities to build on my knowledge and education . My internships have allowed me to gain hands-on practice and observation in the field of social work.

I have great communication skills and great interpersonal skills. These are good qualities for potential job opportunities in the future. These skills are beneficial for my position as a future social worker because it will further allow me to assist clients in different situations.

Sincerely,

Brittany Watkins
