I am both charismatic and transformational

1. What were the results of each assessment? What was your response to the assessment results?

From assesment 9.1 I found that I am more of a transformational leader with a 37 out of 50. I found this to be accurate because I do not have a lot of solo leadership experience in a social work setting. Currently the only leadership experience I have In social work is with the federation of student social workers as treasurer. Therefore, I have given input but not made any leadership choices on my own. For 9.2 I had a result of both a charismatic and transformational leader. I think I lean more towards charismatic leadership of the two because I have not had as many opportunities to have that transitional role in leadership. I have had more roles of encouraging others in a leader format with the federation of student social workers and sports.

2. In Chapter 5, different types of power-legitimate, reward, coercive, referent, expert, connection, and information power-and influencing tactics were discussed. What type of power is the charismatic leader most likely to be associated with and why?

Possibly connection power would be most associated with a charismatic leader. I believe this because to be a good charismatic leader you must have connections with those your leading to help build trust. by connecting with the individuals within the group your leading you are able to share your excitement or passion for a project through those connections. For example if I was a charismatic leader working with a group of college students I would excite them to complete a task with things I know they need. Such as providing free food and drink the group could be more willing to participate and work hard.

3. Do you believe that you are a charismatic leader, transformational leader, or a servant leader? Why? Which type of leadership do you aspire to resemble the most? Why?

I think I am more of a servant leader because I often work to do everything for the members of my group over myself. I think I would aspire to be more like a charismatic leader because I have worked with many charismatic leaders and the results have been good.
