Dear Colleagues,

Please allow this to serve as a Letter of Recommendation for Ms. Jantoria Winston. Over the past three years, I have served as Jantoria's faculty instructor in the Social Work Program at Longwood University. In this capacity, I have observed several qualities and attributes which I feel leave her well-poised for the rigors of graduate school and qualified for employment as a professional human services practitioner.

In her academic performance, Jantoria consistently demonstrated high-level oral and written communication skills, commendable critical thinking skills, professional-level collaboration skills, and meaningful participation. She approached her coursework with authentic commitment, reflecting Social Work values in her work. Jantoria also often demonstrated sound time management, effective organizational skills, and a general commitment to professional self-growth.

In my experience, Jantoria has consistently shown commitment, initiative, accountability, and a sense of caring, in her coursework, field work, and extracurricular activities. Additionally, she has shown a healthy balance between knowing when to complete tasks independently and when to seek guidance.

It has been a pleasure serving as Jantoria's faculty instructor. Her initiative, talent, and work ethic lead me to recommend you give her strong consideration for your program or employment position. Should you have any questions or require additional information, please just contact me at the e-mail address above.

Gratefully and respectfully,

Ian M. Danielsen
