

Survey Question Assignment

The best practices for survey research are clear and understandable questions. Evaluation research is best for determining the impact of some social interventions. For this project, the question “Do Family Fun Time Activities increase family involvement?” is our research question. The dependent variable is family involvement. The survey question I will use to operationalize family involvement is “How much did this activity encourage family involvement?” The independent variable is the number of parents in the household. This will be measured with the question “Do you live in a single-parent household?” These are good questions because they are close-ended, uncluttered, clear, and short. They also are not double-barreled or contain negatives.
